

We're going to have two bacteria. One here, this is resistant. Here is our antibiotic resistant gene. It's going to then make something called a pilus, and transfer the gene over. Boom. It encodes this thing, now we have an antibiotic resistant gene in here and now this organism now has the resistance to the antibiotics. Again and again, antibiotics do this. Again and again we see this happening in our bodies.